The Purpose of the List

This list of was devised with the aim of helping anyone starting research on the history of Uttoxeter to quickly find sources in the vast amount of unrelated information that appears when you do an internet search. It includes books, documents, surveys, maps, online sites and sources I have found during my own research on Uttoxeter. I have listed only those books, sources or references with information on the history, heritage, buildings, inhabitants, businesses within the original boundaries of the town.

At Uttoxeter Library local people are fortunate to have free access to all that Staffordshire Libraries offer to help with local and family history research: free internet access to Find My Past particularly the Baptisms, Marriages and Deaths at St Mary's Parish Church and the Uttoxeter censuses; access to Ancestry including the censuses and private family trees; and a dedicated Local History Section at the Library with books on Uttoxeter, maps,
You can also visit Staffordshire County Council's new County Record Office in Stafford whose extensive collection is now combined with the William Salt Library Collection or you can search the list of their records online at Staffordshire Gateway to the Past and pay for a lookup or to download a document. Searching for Uttoxeter in the Search Box brings up 17541 pages so you need to pinpoint what you are looking for. You can also view 56 pages containing 1000 Uttoxeter related photos on Staffordshire Past Track.

My first step when researching local or family history is to do an internet search which will being up anything and everything that has been posted on a subject. At times it may require a certain amount of trawling maybe up to 20 pages before finding something worthwhile.

My favourite online site is the pay to view site the British Newspaper Archive, because you can do a precise search for a person, a place or an event and give a specific year or period. There are gaps in the Uttoxeter and Staffordshire newspapers posted but as more newspapers and magazines are being added regularly you know that eventually those gaps will be filled. It is much more precise than the newspaper archive on Find My Past.

The wonderful online libraries the Internet Archive and the Hathi Trust Digital Library both allow you access to millions of books for free – a few on Uttoxeter as you will see below.

The Staffordshire Trade Directories going back over 200 years are full of useful information contained in the Uttoxeter section, giving a resume of the town's history, naming its institutions and officers, giving the names and addresses of tradesmen and the businesses and their owners, the names and addresses of all the heads of households the use of Staffordshire inter-library book loan/request service for a small fee and similarly the opportunity to borrow books from other County Libraries for a larger fee and also from the British Library.
Everything is literally at your fingertips making research so much easier and enjoyable. It's a wonderful hobby looking up Uttoxeter's past and I never tire of doing it, finding something new and happily sharing it with others.

The Internet Archive offers over 20,000,000 freely downloadable books and texts. There is also a collection of 2.3 million modern eBooks that may be borrowed by anyone with a free archive.org account.

HathiTrust was founded in 2008 as a not-for-profit collaborative of academic and research libraries now preserving 18+ million digitized items in the HathiTrust Digital Library. We offer reading access to the fullest extent allowable by U.S. and international copyright law, text and data mining tools for the entire corpus, and other emerging services based on the combined collection.
